

Bellingham Technical College names new Vice President of Student Services

HANNAH BOSTWICK - THE BELLINGHAM HERALD

BELLINGHAM - Bellingham Technical College announced Dr. Richard L. Meier as the new vice president of student services for the college Thursday, July 1.

Meier, who most recently worked for Eastern Washington University as the dean of students/associate vice president of student life, began his career in higher education more than 37 years ago at Central Washington University, said Marni Saling Mayer, director of communications for Bellingham Technical College.

While at Central Washington University, Meier held many positions, ending his time there in 2000 as the associate vice president for student affairs, Mayer said.

Meier then worked as the interim vice president for student affairs at Lewis-Clark State College in Idaho before working at Eastern Washington University, Mayer said.

Meier currently lives in Bellingham with his wife, Kim Freier, who works for Washington State University.

Meier began his duties as vice president of student services Thursday.
